

What the early pioneer
log school with its benches was like is portrayed here. Such early schoolrooms
were also used for
church meetings.
(Painting by Dolly Rockwood)

Deseret 1776-1976

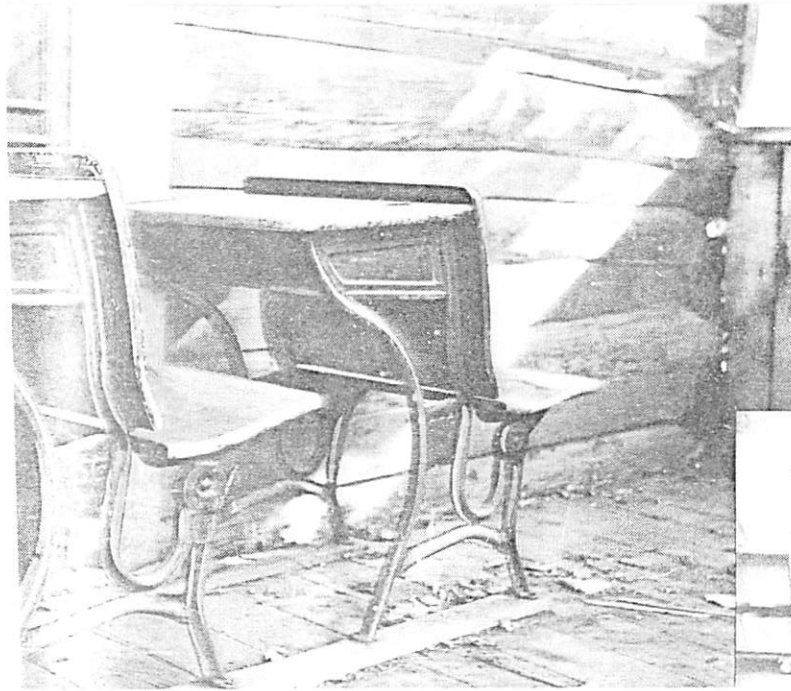

DAUGHTERS OF UTAH PIONEERS

Early Utah school room after 1900 when, after years of struggle, "free" public schools came to the state.

Children and teachers pose before the typical old one-room Utah frontier school house.

Progress in education is typified here by two discarded old school desks against the log wall, and the new open classroom of the Muir Elementary School in Bountiful, Utah. It looks more like a library than a classroom.

